Las Cruces, NM

Sue is a licensed speech-language pathologist (SLP) and a dyslexia specialist; she currently works with children and adults with dyslexia through her private practice in Las Cruces. She holds certifications through the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association as an SLP, and through the Academic Language Therapy Association as an academic language therapist (CALT) and as a trainer of dyslexia therapists (QI-CALT). Sue has over 35 years of experience working with children with speech, language, and reading disorders, including dyslexia, and she is experienced in teacher training and clinical supervision in post-secondary settings.

Sue's commitment to disseminating research-based information about dyslexia is reflected in her service as a long-time Board Member for the Southwest Branch of the International Dyslexia Association (SWIDA), both as an Albuquerque and as a Las Cruces member. She now serves on the Advisory Council for SWIDA. After 35 years in the field, she remains passionate about providing state-of-the art treatment for dyslexia, about disseminating accurate and high-quality information about dyslexia and its treatment, and about bridging the gap between research and practice.
